Working in the care sector

The care sector currently employs approximately 1 in 10 of the working population in the UK. It covers a range of services across many organisations within the public, private and voluntary sectors, including in hospitals, hospices and nursing care homes. The role of the lead adult care worker is to make a positive difference to another person's life when they are faced with physical, practical, social, emotional or intellectual challenges. They are also expected to exercise judgement and take appropriate action to support individuals to maintain their independence, dignity and control.

The programme's structure

Your apprentice will undertake a programme of study for a typical duration of 18 months in a suitable care setting and complete the Care Certificate as part of the programme.
